Excerpt: .hundred and fifty; while California, estimating its population at six hundred thousand, contains only a fraction over three; and of this infinitesimal population five-sixths live in cities, towns and villages. I can t see how any man could make this statement, with a full knowledge that it might reach the eye of Prof. Blake, Prof. Newberry, or some other distinguished man who knows it is only a play upon words. He argues here, and compares population, productions, and area, with Italy, England, and Ireland, as if the whole Territory of California was, by any means, capable of being cultivated; when the fact is, as is well known, that by no system of possible or probable irrigation, within the next hundred years can, or will 10,000,000 acres be reclaimed, irrigated, or cultivated in California. The very statement he afterwards makes, in regard to the six or seven millions of acres of cultivatable lands being open to settlement in the Sacramento Valley over twenty years, and occupied, on account of the want of irrigation, by only two or three thousand agricultural souls, tells the true condition of nine-tenths of the possibly cultivatable area of California., This statement, and others like it, excited me for a while, but when I marched up to, and dug down into the subject, I found it nothing but sand. I have troubled the reader with the discussion of this subject here, in order that he might see a sample of the...
