When the meat is cut it should be slightly rubbed with fine salt, and suffered to lay a day or two that the salt may extract the blood; it may then be packed tight in the cask, and the pickle, having become cold, may be turned upon and should cover the meat. A follower, to fit the inside of the cask, should then be laid on, and a weight put on it, in order to keep the meat at all times covered with pickle. The sugar may be omitted without material detriment. In the spring the pickle must be turned off, boi ed with some additional salt and molasses, skimmed, and when cold returned to the cask. For domestic use, beef and pork hams should not be salted the day the animals are killed, but kept.nntil its fibre has become short and tender, as these changes do not take place after it has been acted upon by the salt. Meat that is to be dried and smoked, requires less salt than that which is to remain in pickle, on account of the preserving qualities of the pyrolignic acid, which is supplied by the smoke of the wood. The great art in smoking meat well seems to consist in having the meat dried by smoke, and not by heat. The hams of Westphalia, and the smoked beef of Hamburg, which are unrivalled in reputation, are managed in this way. The Westphalian farmers have a closet...
