Excerpt: .he afterwards published with a dedication to Cranmer as Archbishop. Seckundorf, Hist. Lutheran. L. 3. p. 41. The friendship between the two divines was cemented by the niece of Osiander, who gave her hand to Cranmer; he did not however take her over with him, when he returned from his embassy, but sent for her in 1534. The Romanists, who from their enmity against him, have represented him as a man who acted a part throughout with a view to preferment, have not failed to observe that he was incapable of a bishopric on account of his second nuptials; but his defenders have replied, that the Apostle in the scripture to which they refer (1 Tim. ii. 3.) only forbids the bigamy, and even polygamy, which was too common among the Jews. While Cranmer was negotiating in Germany, other agents were employed to the same effect in France aud Italy; and when Henry had obtained favourable decisions not only from the two Universities in his own dominions, but from those of Bologna, Padua, Ferrara, Paris, and other foreign seminaries, he laid them before his parliament, together with opinions obtained from leading individuals, and the books that had been composed on the subject by the supporters of his cause. There were twelve seals of universities shown, and a hundred books produced. On the display of this formidable host of authorities, the Chancellor desired the members to report in their respective counties, that they clearly saw the...
